

ABSTRACT

A trigger mechanism used for initiating a phase change in a variable liquid element by an activating material. The trigger mechanism also relates to a variable liquid element enclosed in a container with at least one perforation in the container, an activating material, and a movable barrier means for bringing the activation material into contact with the perforation.